He married ELIZA STONE January 14, 1836, daughter of ELI STONE and ELIZA WILLIAMS.*

Notes for CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS PUTNAM, SR.:

In 1815 Bradstreet Baldwin of Londonderry, Vermont, built a sawmill on the river at what is now the village of Putnamville, taking advantage of the fall of thirty-two feet. The mill had a capacity for sawing 100,000 feet of lumber per annum.

Christopher Columbus Putnam, Sr. bought the mill in 1845. Nine years from that date he torn down the old mill and erected a large double gang mill on the opposite side of the river, together with a gristmill on and machinery for dressing lumber. The mill was consumed by fire in 1862. The same year a new mill was built on the same site with a capacity of 2,000,000 feet of dressed lumber per year.

"In 1865, after his return from the war, his son Christopher C. Putnam, Jr., was taken into partnership and the firm name changed to C.C. Putnam & Son. In 1871 the firm purchased the Templeton and Vail mill in Worcester, in 1885, built a large steam Dressing mill at Putnamville, and in 1890 a steam sawmill in Elmore, increasing their business from 100,000 feet per year in 1845 to 6,000,000 feet in 1898.

"Mr. Putnam possessed good common sense and the ability to carry out whatever he undertook. Receiving only a common school education, he labored all his life to extend his field of learning, and by reading and close application acquired a large fund of general information. Although never an office-seeker, yet he held nearly all the offices which his town could give him. In early life he was an old-time Whig, an admirer of Clay, Webster, Sumner, and Lincoln, voting for General Harrison in 1840 and for his grandson in 1888.

"A sturdy, genuine old Vermonter, who loved his family, respected the rights of those in his employ, and called every man his friend."

-Vermont paper.

He has held various local offices, and in 1864 was representative.

Notes for WILLIAM PUTNAM:

William Putnam and his brothers, Joshua and Thomas, were associated together in business in early life. They had inherited property from their father, and by well applied efforts had increased their stake in the country. At the time of the "Rebellion" the Putnams were well-to-do farmers and lumbermen. The year 1837 had seen the virtual crushing out of the rebellion in Lower Canada, and it was during the period following the successes of the government party in which happened the incidents which led to the first arrest of William Putnam. The second rebellion is said to have broken out on the third of November, 1838. On the ninth occurred the battle of Odeltown, and on the following day the "Patriots" were successful at Beauharnois, and at the same time the windmill at Prescott was fortified by a band of "Patriots." This post was held till the arrival of regulars with artillery. At Prescott the loss of the British troops was 13 killed, 67 wounded. The "Patriots" lost about 40 killed, and 110 surrendered. William Putnam was not engaged in any of these encounters. Dr. W.E. Putnam of Bennington, a nephew of William Putnam, states that his father, Thomas Putnam, had told him that William Putnam was convinced of the futility of the proposed attack on Windsor, and strongly urged delay until the temper of the inhabitants was better known. His prudent counsel was overruled and, as he never lacked courage, he led the party as had been arranged. The narrative which now follows is very nearly as written. The manuscript was hurriedly written, and evidently had not been revised, and therefore it has been found necessary to change in a slight degree the wording of the story.

THE NARRATIVE OF WARNER HERKIMER PUTNAM

"My father was only four years old when he landed in the forest, and grew up with the freedom of the deer. He had but six weeks schooling in his boyhood. He was a man of great strength and of an iron will. His temperament was cheerful and lively, and, withal, he was possessed of good business ability. He was associated with his brothers in business. As each of the younger boys married their share was set off to them. Throughout the country they were known as the Putnam Brothers, and acquired considerable property in the shape of land, mills, and public houses. When the war of 1812 broke out William and Joshua were drafted into the Canadian service and served at the battles of Lundy's Lane and Queenstown Heights. For gallant services, William was commissioned a captain of militia of the city of London, and held that position for many years, until the growth of party feeling led him to resign in 1836. The native and American born inhabitants were antagonistic to those settlers who were new comers from Great Britain. The jealousy felt by each party for the other was intensified by the action of government in creating land monopolies and exempting large grants from taxation. The Clergy-Reserve was especially distasteful to many, for although set aside for the benefit of the Protestant religion it was beneficial only to the English Church. Local and profitable positions were given to friends of the party in power without regard for local prejudices. In 1836 the speaker* of the House of Parliament visited England to lay the grievances of the people before the home government, but although he remained there a year he was not accorded a hearing. On his return the native party felt that but two alternatives were left to them, to submit to the oppression which bore so hardly upon their temper or to appeal to arms. Without considering the consequences of such an act, the latter alternative was adopted. William Putnam had resigned his commission in 1836; he was not willing to oppose his party friends, and foresaw that trouble was coming. During the short struggle which followed he remained quietly at home. His friends in arms were defeated and scattered. The officers of the victorious faction were mainly old friends and acquaintance of my father, and invited him to join with them in a jollification at the hotel in Delaware, where he was then living. Not wishing to make enemies, he joined the party, all of whom knew his principles. During the evening, as usual on such occasions, heavy drinking was indulged in. Toasts were offered. That to the Queen and royal family were participated in by all present. Then the health of the Governor-General was proposed, and Mr. Putnam hesitated and finally set his glass down untouched. His exception was noticed by a rude and burly Englishman, a captain, the very one who had succeeded Putnam in command of his former company, who demanded that he drink the toast, and used insulting language as well as denouncing him as a traitor. Mr. Putnam gave his reason in a few words. He then took exceptions at the officer's remarks, and slapped his face, at the same time challenging him to apologize or fight, or be denounced as a coward. Friends attempted to interpose, but Putnam insisted that he was a loyal citizen of Canada, and would have an apology. He then returned to his home, put his weapon in order and again visited the tavern, and in this calmer mood repeated the challenge, which he left open to any gentleman who dared question his loyalty to the crown.

"On the evening of the 25th of Dec., 1837, our house was surrounded by a troop of cavalry, the officer in command remarking, 'We shall have trouble here.' The door being open, father walked out saying 'You will have no trouble here; what are your demands?' The officer requested him to walk over to the hotel, which he did, and was there placed under arrest, bound hands and feet, and placed in the bottom of a lumber wagon without straw or blankets. They immediately started for London. It was a cold, wet night, and although the guards twice stopped for refreshments and warmth, the prisoner, tightly bound, was left to withstand the effects of the weather unsheltered. His request to loosen his bonds, which were so tightly bound as to cause great suffering, was met with a prick of the bayonet and surly order to lie still. The party arrived in London on the 26th Dec., at four o'clock in the morning, and the prisoner was placed in jail. There he was kept for five months. Bribery was freely employed to procure evidence to sustain the charge of high treason against him, but failed, and in June, without a trial, he was set free. In the meantime, in January, the family moved from the house in Delaware, back to the farm, but on the 4th of February the buildings were totally destroyed by fire, the work of an incendiary. The family barely escaped with their lives, and were left destitute and obliged to seek refuge with friends.

"A week after father's release, while we were in hopes that further persecution would be abandoned, father received a letter from Col. Burwell, commanding the western forces, and an old friend, conveying the information that he was about to be rearrested and counselling him to fly.

"The family was called together, the letter read, and father said he thought the advice good. He should leave us for awhile and, in company with his brother Thomas, seek safety in the United States. Their course was by boat, by way of a branch of the Thames, thence by the Thames to Lake St. Clair, and along its shore to the head of the Detroit River, and so across the channel to the American side. The Thames ran through London, Kilworth, Delaware, where he had been arrested, Wardsville and Chatham. For years he had floated lumber down those streams, and was well known throughout the territory, especially by the settlers along the banks. On the morning of the departure, it was Sunday, as the boat was passing under the bridge, uncle and father in it, people going to church halted on the bridge. Many were old friends, some differed in political opinions. Father stood up in the boat and said to them: 'I am forced to leave my home, my family, and my country, or submit to arrest again, which I would not suffer.' He would never be taken alive. He bade them a farewell, and floated down the river out of sight. He safely arrived in Detroit. At Detroit he found many acquaintances, among them one Captain Cary, who still held his commission in the Canadian militia. Cary was an Englishman. Learning from father that he had left his family unsettled, and of his desire to return home in order to settle them, Cary offered, if father would visit his place at the forks of Bear River, about seventy miles from Detroit and sixty from London, he would drive him to his house and stay with him for a time, and said that he would protect him from disturbance. Father, with Uncle Thomas** and two others, kept the rendezvous. The house stood some way from the road, and father said he would go and see if all was clear. While stopping at the well to take a drink, Cary came out and shook hands with him. Then taking father's gun, said, 'Let me have your gun.'

"Cary took hold of the gun and drew it toward him. Father said 'Cary, let go of my gun.' At that Cary placed his hands on him and said, 'You are my prisoner, in the King's name.' Father stood facing the house. He saw the door open and armed soldiers come out. He realized that he was betrayed. Drawing his pistol, he shot Cary and made for the fence, which he jumped under fire of the soldiers. The country was aroused, and $1000 reward offered for the body of William Putnam, dead or live.

"During the night father came upon an Indian camp. He was well known to the Indians, and spoke their language, and to them he told his story. Knowing how impossible it would be to cross the lines, the Indians conducted him to a hidingplace, where they faithfully protected and fed him for thirty days. He was then taken to the Banks of the Huron River, the door of an old barn wrenched off and he was soon afloat. He safely effected the crossing [of one mile] and was again safe on American soil, near the town of Palmer. He soon went on to Detroit. He knew that he was a ruined man, and could not hope for pardon or toleration from the government. Cary lived three days, during which time he confessed that he had been promised promotion if he could arrest Putnam and his friends with arms in their hands, which indeed he very nearly accomplished by his treacherous act.

"After the second arrival at Detroit, father entered heartily into the plans of the 'patriots,' as they were termed. A secret camp was arranged at Creet, west of Detroit, for the purpose of raising a force to cross the river and give battle, for it was thought if a stand could be made, they would soon gain strength. Four hundred men were enrolled and equipped. Putnam was made commander. A steamboat was chartered to cross the river, and on the fourth of December, in the evening, they crossed and landed at the town of Windsor, opposite Detroit. As the steamer returned to the American shore again there was no hope but to fight to the last. At Windsor the steamer Thames was burned at the wharf, the militia routed, the barracks burned. Spies were in the party, and before the party crossed the river word had been carried to the British troops at Post Malden, who were but illy disciplined compared with regular troops. They stood their ground for a time, but the struggle was short and destructive. Many dead were left on the field on both sides. My father was shot through the brain.*** My two brothers were with him, but escaped, the youngest recrossed the river on an ice cake amid flying bullets, the other escaped to the woods. The wounded were bayoneted. The prisoners were placed on a fence and shot. Many of the dead were buried on the field, but my father's remains were allowed to be taken up and placed in a coffin and buried in a friend's garden. Thus ended the career of my father, in the prime of life, driven to desperation through the fear and jealousy of those in power. His was a noble life, sacrificed to tyranny and oppression. He was one of the noblest of men, and an affectionate husband, a kind and indulgent father, honorable and generous to a fault."

Here ends the manuscript narrative.

Dr. Putnam writes: "The rebels presented my uncle with a handsome sword on that night (the night before the attack on Windsor), which weapon was found tightly clenched in his hand when his dead body was found after the battle. Col. Prince (so notorious) obtained the sword, and kept it as a souvenir, notwithstanding the effort my father made to obtain it after the battle was over."

This Col. Prince was the British commander, and he it was who ordered the prisoners to be shot, as he himself reports in his dispatch to his superiors. The number killed was twenty-one, "besides four brought in just at the close, and immediately after the engagement, all of whom I ordered to be shot on the spot, which was done accordingly." (Report of Colonel Prince.)****

Lord Durham on hearing of this atrocious act exclaimed in the House of Lords, "he had no hesitation in stating that Col. Prince was a murderer, and a disgrace to the name of a British officer." Prince was cashiered and dismissed the service. Lord Durham, afterward became Governor-general of Canada, and was entertained by Thomas Putnam at his home.

* Mr. Putnam names him as Dr. Charles Duncombe, which seems to be an error. However, Duncombe was one of the prominent "rebels." He owed his life to Thomas Putnam, for on one occasion he was closely pursued, and after several days' wandering, during which he fed on berries and roots, he reached the house of Thomas Putnam, who concealed him, and that night carried him to the home of Colonel Douglas, who kept him concealed for several months till he could get him across the border, which Duncombe accomplished disguised in woman's apparel. Soldiers visited the Douglas house several times while Duncombe was concealed there.

** Dr. Putnam informs Eben Putnam that Thomas Putnam was not with his brother on this occasion, as he had returned home immediately his brother was safe on American territory.

*** The following account of Putnam's death was given by Major McGuise, who stood by Putnam's side at the time: "After ordering his party to retreat, he turned and faced the British, shook his sword in their faces, uttering a curse of disappointment and rage. A British soldier stepped forward and deliberately shot him through the forehead."

**** Of the prisoners taken in Upper Canada, one hundred and eighty were tried by court-martial in the spring of 1889, and condemned to be hanged, all but twenty-four were recommended to merciful consideration of the Government. A number were pardoned, ten were hanged, but most were transported to Van Diemen's land, where numbers died.

Notes for THOMAS PUTNAM:

The early life of Thomas Putnam was uneventful. He soon showed evidence of a strong individuality, which developed later into a vigorous and sturdy manhood. He located at Dorchester, Upper Canada, in the year 1825 and laid the foundation of an extensive mercantile and lumbering business which proved very successful, Mr. Putnam becoming one of the most prominent private citizens in western Ontario, then Canada West. He and his brothers, Joshua and Williams, were associated together in business in early life. They had inherited property from their father, and by well applied efforts had increased their stake in the country. At the time of the "Rebellion" the Putnams were well-to-do farmers and lumbermen. As each of the younger boys married their share was set off to them. Throughout the country they were known as the Putnam Brothers, and acquired considerable property in the shape of land, mills, and public houses.

About the year 1839, the name of Dorchester was changed to Putnam in honor of the subject of this sketch. During the troublous time incident to the Canadian rebellion of 1837-38, Mr. Putnam sympathized with the supporters of responsible government and thus became an object of suspicion to the Tory party then in power, so much so in fact that he was obliged to remain in concealment many weeks to save himself from imprisonment, and possibly a worse fate. He had previously, in anticipation of trouble, constructed a secret chamber in his house, entered only by a concealed sliding panel. Here he lay six weeks, during which time British Soldiers searched the house. This chamber is still to be seen in the old mansion house. He greatly aided the rebel cause with both money and influence. His brother, William Putnam, was one of the leaders of the rebel forces in Upper Canada, and commanded rebels at the battle of Winsdor, where he fell at the head of his men.

Mr. Putnam was appointed a magistrate by the Governor in 1838, an office he retained to the time of his death, March 26, 1880. This office is a life appointment in Canada. He refused other public offices, which were frequently tendered him. Mr. Putnam met with business reverses late in life, which left him only a very moderate competence after honorably satisfying the demands of every creditor in full, although not compelled to do so by law at the time, his losses having been due to the dishonesty of a partner whom he trusted.

He married SARAH ANN MASON March 05, 1838 in Ludlow, Vermont, daughter of OLIVER MASON and LOIS STEELE.

Notes for JAMES MADISON PUTNAM:

Coloniel James Madison Putnam learned the trade of a millwright and in 1840 fitted up large mills at Whitehall. There he contracted a disease which necessitated his withdrawal from active business and led him to open a hotel at Proctorsville, and in 1847 to take the Franklin House at Rutland, Vermont. He was constable and for many years sheriff of Windham County, and held various other offices. He was one of the last survivors of the old line commissioned officers of the militia. He was one of the principal benefactors of St. Paul's Universalist parish in Rutland, and a prominent odd-fellow and mason. In later years, until 1880, he was chief of police, also a wholesale dealer in coal and grain. In stature he was 5 ft. 9in.; 165 lbs.; and had blue eyes and brown hair.

He married (1) ALMIRA FRENCH April 19, 1821 in Croydon, New Hampshire, daughter of NATHANIEL FRENCH. He married (2) MARY COLBY WFT Est. 1824-1855.*

Notes for JOHN PUTNAM:

John Putnam served in the militia and was selectman of Croydon, New Hampshire, 1837, 1838, 1840, and 1854. In 1840 was representative, and was also a member of the Constitutional Convention. He was much respected and popular, and was generally known as "Uncle Tom." He is especially mentioned in Wheeler's History of Croydon. He was strong both physically and mentally, and by industry became one of the most prosperous farmers in Croydon. A descendant writes that "all of his children had a marked family likeness, the women tall, spare and dark, the men less tall and less dark, brown haired and gray eyed." A Croydon gentlemen states that "the Putnams of that place are generally above the average in size and strength and have dark hair and eyes."

The Croydon Putnams, except James W., were Democrats.

From a letter of a descendant of his father, David Putnam (No. 491), we learn that family tradition asserts he served in a company raised by Captain Whipple in Croydon to check Burgoyne's invasion, and was in active service at Stillwater and present at Burgoyne's surrender. During the long winter evenings of that period the women plaited straw for sale and the men at home helped. The farms were very rocky and required incessant toil.

He was the last of the family to die.

He married SUKEY GIBSON November 13, 1808 in Croydon, New Hampshire, daughter of WILLIAM GIBSON and ABIGAIL SAWYER.

Notes for SAMUEL PUTNAM:
Samuel Putnam was a farmer, and for a while, in Troy, New York, a teamster. He was generous, genial, witty, and strong-hearted, but not properous in a worldly sense. In height he was but little over 5 ft., and weighed about 140 lbs., and had dark hair and eyes. His endurance was great and as a youth he would walk from Croydon to Boston, 100 miles. His grandson, R.W. Putnam, writes, "Grandfather and my father, Winslow, went to McHenry Co., Illinois, with grandfather's brother, who remained there, but father and grandfather returned to New York."

He married AZUBA STANHOPE December 07, 1791 in Presbyterian Church, Greenfield, Massachusetts, daughter of SAMUEL STANHOPE.

Notes for ANDREW PUTNAM:

Captain Andrew Putnam settled in Stokton, New York. The following account is furnished by the Honorable Deloss Putnam:

"About a year previous to his marriage, in company with several other young men, he went to Vermont to secure a farm from the unsurveyed lands of the Government. But the party endured much suffering, and, disappointed with the country, they all finally returned to their homes in Massachusetts.

"Near the close of the year 1795, Mr. Putnam journeyed into the state of New York, and purchased 200 acres of wild land in the town of Brookfield, Madison County. After preparing a temporary dwelling on his new purchase, he returned to Massachusetts, and in the following February, accompanied by his wife and two children, Harriet and Newell. The journey was made with an ox team and sled to their new home in Brookfield.

"The dangers from hostile Indians were then at times very great, and to afford protection to the inhabitants a militia company was organized under the laws of the state, and Andrew Putnam was chosen commander and commissioned as Captain. This company was thoroughly drilled and disciplined, and during the War of 1812 was of special service in protecting the settlers, while several of the younger portion, including Newell, the Captain's oldest son, saw service elsewhere.

"By the close of the year 1811, Capt. Putnam's family numbered ten children. Much of the forest had been changed to cultivated fields, affording ample means for subsistence and comfort. In February, 1813, Harriet, the only daughter, and eldest of the children, was united in marriage to Jonathan Bugbee, and in the January following removed with her husband to the distant wilds of Chautauqua, where he had previously prepared a home. In the fall of 1816, the Captain with his wife made the long journey to the home of their daughter on a visit. They were so well pleased with the country that soon after returning East they accepted an offer of $2000 for their farm, and made careful preparations for their journey westward. Early in February, 1817, the adieus were spoken, and with a train consisting of one span of horses and sleigh, four yoke of oxen and two sleds, followed by thirteen cows and young cattle, the wilderness journey of over two hundred and fifty miles was undertaken. The snow was deep; the actions of the Indians were at times suspicious; the white inhabitants were few along the route; and the progress was slow and tedious.

"An association known as the Holland Land Company had secured all the Government lands in the western part of New York, and in 1815, to encourage immigration, opened an excuse for a road from the Genesee River to the head of Chautauqua Lake. Following this trail, Capt. Putnam and family, after a journey of eighteen days, arrived on the 20th of february, 1817, at the log cabin home of their daughter. After a short rest he proceeded to the land office at the head of Chautauqua Lake, and secured at a little over $4 per acre 170 acres of timbered land in the south part of the present town of Stockton. The cattle subsisted through the balance of the winter almost entirely on browse, and in the spring enjoyed the freedom and green herbage of the forest. On the organization of the town of Stockton in 1821, Capt. Putnam was the only resident that had secured a deed for the land purchased.

"Following the example of the other settlers he constructed a log house for temporary use, but soon commenced the erection of a large two-story dwelling, which occupied two years' of time in completing. That grand old yellow mansion for more than seventy years was a prominent landmark. It was taken down, in the winter of 1889, and a more prominent structure now occupies its foundations. From the 'pen pictures' of the late Judge L. Bugbee, we find that Capt. Putnam was six feet one inch in height, with a round, well balanced head, which was bald at the top. His eyes were blue and full, nose medium in size, lips thin, chin full and on a line with the forehead, and his body as straight as a arrow.

"In May, 1828, he had the misfortune to cut one of his knees, and being then called from home on public business, he took a severe cold. His knee became inflamed, and the accident, regarded with little apprehension at first, resulted in terminating his eventful life on June 14, 1828. He was a man of great energy and firmness, and in religious faith a Baptist. His ashes now repose in Union Cemetary, at Centralia, about one mile from the place of his death.

"The widow of Capt. Putnam lived to see her ninety-fourth year. She was a lady of more than ordinary intelligence. During the last lears of her life she resided with her children. She died on the 18th of Jan., 1864, at the home of her son, Newell.

"Harriet Putnam (No. 2838), was united in marriage Bugbee in February, 1813. Wedding tours were not then enjoyed in the elegance and comfort of palace coaches, but the young bride was not unhappy in the society of her gallant companion, as they plodded slowly forward, with oxen and sled, to the little clearing and home he had prepared in the forest.

"The present generation can scarcely imagine the log cabin, 16x20 feet, with the great open fire at one end of the only room, and that room serving as kitchen, pantry, parlor and bedroom; with space allotted for the loom, the spinning-wheel, the distaff, and - finally, the cradle. Such was not the home of one family alone, but all in the settlement; nearly all were young, and all were hopeful. Yet to every heart came frequent thoughts of the comforts left in the East, and of the dear ones that remained there. At dusk, the little flocks of sheep were driven where the wolves would not find them; if the stock of venison got low, the careful marksman brought a fresh deer from the forest, and placed it in a corner where no panther might scent it. Then, when the glowing fire illuminated the room, if a few neighbors called, the fiddle was put in tune, and the merry dancers enjoyed the space that somehow was provided.

"About 1821, Harriet's husband extended their buildings, and for a few days kept a tavern. After the death of Mr. Bugbee in 1829, their son, Judge L., arranged with the heirs that he should retain the homestead, and the widow generally made taht her home until her death in Oct., 1880, at the age of eighty-eight years.

"Of the children of Harriet, Andrew Putnam Bugbee, born Aug. 5, 1816, married a lady of Chandlers Valley, Pa., at which place he now resides. Judge L. Bugbee was born Feb. 10, 1818, and married Mary Ann Flagg. He was a prominent citizen, faithful to many official positions, and an author of much distinction. From his sketches of the pioneer history of the county is gathered much information contained in these sketches. Since the death of Judge on June 9, 1888, his only son, J. Eugene, retains the old homestaed at Centralia, N.Y. Of the remaining children of Harriet, Charity, widow of the late Israel Strong, resides in Crestone, Colorado; and Hattie, the accomplished wife of J. Garrish Chamberlain, a gentleman of much influence and culture, has a beautiful home in Sheffield, Alabama."

He married VESTA MALLERY April 28, 1818 in Buckland, Massachusetts, daughter of HIRAM MALLERY and HANNAH.

Notes for ABNER PUTNAM:

The above record was furnished by Judge Deloss Putnam from records in possession of Allen Putnam of Burnham (Cassadaga), New York, who also furnished the following account of Abner Putnam.

"Soon after the young couple started with an ox-team for the 'Holland Purchase,' New York, and were about six weeks in performing the journey. Abner Putnam arrived in the town of Stockton, County of Chautauqua, the 18th of June, 1818, and took a piece of heavy timbered land on the outlet of Cassadaga Lake, which required for many years the laborious exercise of his strong physical powers to clear and subdue, before he could raise sufficient grain for the support of his family. At that early period the pioneer settler of western New York had to endure many severe and serious privations. There were no roads, mills, churches, schools or stores. The rudest kind of implements of husbandry suffered to subdue the heavy forest. The next year he went back to Massachusetts, carrying a heavy knapsack on his back, and returned with it heavier laden, weighing 43 lbs. at Savona, where he stopped with a friend to rest. The raising of sheep was one of the necessary branches of husbandry at that time, and it was attended with serious losses from the frequent depredations of wolves which destroyed large numbers of the flocks. To exterminate them it was a part of his duty, like his distinguished kinsman, the wolf-slayer, to unite with neighbors, often from neighboring towns, and surround a large tract of woodland, to which the wolves retired after making their attacks upon the various flocks at night.

"It is not compatible with this short sketch to give a detailed account of the whole affair, but suffice it to say the entire program was successfully carried out, and a number of wolves, deer and bears were killed, besides a number of other animals. After this sheep raising was more profitable. Soon the forest began to disappear before the sturdy strokes of the woodman's axe, and he lived to see it replaced with more inviting fields of grain. Roads were made, schoolhouses built, churches reared, mills located upon almost every stream; and after a while the slow ox-team was exchanged for horses, and they in turn gave place for the 'Iron Horse,' which now goes through the same farm he cleared, puffing and snorting, its shrill whistle taking the place of the shriek of the panther and howl of the wolf. He lived upon the same farm until his death. He was a conscientious member of the Baptist church."

He married (1) LAURA BRADLEY February 22, 1813. He married (2) BETSEY STILLWELL ALLCOTT October 17, 1824.

Notes for LEWIS PUTNAM:

Lewis Putnam was born in a log cabin when Saratoga, New York, was a wilderness, indeed, he was the first white child born there. The brothers, Lewis and Rockwell, operated a mill on "Put's Pond" and engaged in extensive lumbering operations. At first they were obliged to cart their lumber to Schuylerville, and then to raft it down the Hudson River. During the War of 1812 Lewis Putnam marched to Plattsburg as Colonel of a regiment.

He built the Centre House and managed it until 1836. He discovered and tubed the spring bearing his name, in 1833. As the place increased in importance he added to the wealth which he had accumulated by honest and cautious effort. A Freemason and until the last years of his life a Presbyterian, later an Episcopalian, his life was in accordance with the regulations of conduct encouraged by those bodies.

She married SAMUEL PRUYN August 15, 1838 in Albany, New York, son of JOHN S. PRUYN.

Notes for MARY PUTNAM:

In early life Mrs. Pruyne became active in religious and charitable work. Through her energy, prudence and influence, two industrial schools and the House of Shelter were established in Albany, New York, nor were her efforts abandoned even then. In May, 1871, she went to Japan as a missionary under the auspices of the Woman's Union Missionary Society. She established at Yokohama the first institution for the education of girls in that country. After five years she returned to Albany, but in January, 1883, she went to Shanghai, China, and established an institution similar to that in Yokohama.

In 1884 her health gave way from nervous exhaustion, and she returned home to die after a long and painful illness. Mrs. Pruyne was the author of "grandmother's Letters from Japan."

He married MARY D. HERSKELL 1832 in Springfield, Ohio, daughter of JOHN HERSKELL.*

Notes for RUFUS PUTNAM:

General Rufus Putnam inherited to a marked degree the military spirit of his grandfather. As a boy, when the local militia regiment was ordered out upon news of Hull's surrender, he insisted upon following his father and elder brother Franklin, to the parade ground, nine miles away, and, hearing the call for volunteers, was the first to step into line. The "little drum-major's" action was the signal for enthusiastic volunteering. The boy was allowed to accompany the troops, and upon thw murder of drum-major Newman was permitted to serve in that capacity during the remainder of the war, the company being attached to general Tupper's command. After the war he was sent to the McIntire Military School. He lived with his grandfather Putnam till the latter's death, and attended Marietta Academy, where he excelled in athletic sports, especially equestrian. In 1825 he was chosen captain of an independent troop composed of boys about sixteen years of age, which, in 1826, escorted Governor Clinton from Sumerset to Putnam. In 1827, Colonel Henry Mason, of Peoria, Illinois, while visiting Judge Putnam, persuaded the son to accompany him home. Consequently Putnam had a part in the Red Bird Chief war, as adutant in Mason's regiment. From 1826 to 1833 he engaged in business in Springfield and Putnam, Ohio, and elsewhere. He was city clerk of dayton, Ohio, and several times mayor of South Charlestown, Ohio. In 1835 he was elected colonel of the 2d Regiment, 3d Brigade of Ohio Militia. During the border war, General Mason having resigned, he commissioned, by Governor Lucas, Major-General of the 5th Division of Ohio Militia. In 1847 he volunteered with his cavalry regiment as a reserve during the war. After this he engaged in business, and finally purchased the Herald, a Greenville paper, supporting the democratic party. He conducted the Herald till his removal to Newark, in 1855, when he sold out to his son, John H. Putnam. He was present in the Spirit Lake campaign, and for several years was employed in organizing the militia. He was appointed instructor at Fort Rowe Military Institute, and held that position during the Civil War till 1864. He was the third president of the Pioneer Association, founded by his grandfather, the first president, Judge Edwin Putnam being the second, and for years collected materials for a pioneer history of Ohio. He lived in Chillicothe, Ohio.

Notes for JOSEPH PUTNAM:

Joseph Putnam was a shoemaker and manufacturer, and engaged in business in Marblehead, Gloucester (1804-25), and finally in Salem, Massachusetts, and there invented the "stone aqueduct" and drain pipes, for which he had a patent in 1829. This invention was sneered at and ridiculed by the Salem and Danvers Aqueduct Company, who used pine logs for their pipes, by Mayor Quincy of Boston, by Portland people, and nearly all to whom the persevering inventor showed his pipes. It is said, that the Honorable Stephen C. Phillips of Salem, Massachusetts, was the only man to encourage the inventor or see the great utility of the stone conduits. Mr. Elijah Upton, a tanner of South Peabody, Massachusetts, was probably the first to use the pipe, having a line laid in his tanyard, and a Captain Trask of Gloucester piped his spring into his house. These were about the only instances where the inventor succeeded in introducing his piping now in use for drainage purposes everywhere. The invention only brought poverty and ridicule to Mr. Putnam.

While Mr. Putnam was attempting to convince skeptics that "stone" pipes were better than wodden, a coal dealer from Pennsylvania came to see him. This dealer sought to introduce the use of anthracite coal in the New England states and was meeting with as much ridicule as Mr. Putnam. What he needed was a stove or stove lining which would withstand the heat of the coal, and this he could not find. Mr. Putnam saw the man and the situation, and soon had invented a lining which was fitted to a score of stoves and which proved successful. The new linings were introduced in Boston, Portland, Worcester, and elsewhere, bringing in some measures success and comfort to the inventor. He continued the manufacture of these linings for twenty-five years. The family had blue eyes and dark hair, which turned gray early.

He married BETSY PRESTON November 05, 1801 in Danvers, Massachusetts, daughter of JOHN PRESTON and MEHITABLE WHITE.

Notes for PERLEY PUTNAM:

Colonel Perley Putnam in early life was a ship carpenter and helped build the frigate Essex. He became a builder, and furnished the plans and specifications for the present custom house at Salem, Massachusetts, and superintended its construction. He was instrumental as First Captain in establishing the Mechanic Light Infantry, 1807. Commissioned Major 48th Regiment, United State Army, 1813, and in the autumn of that year he was assigned the command of Fort Sullivan at Eastport, Maine. Having under his command but 48 effective men, he was forced to surrender that place to the british General Sir Thomas Hardy, in command of a fleet of seven ships and a land force of 2000 troops. He was prominent in town and city affairs, frequently selectman of Salem and in 1836 helped draft the first city charter. Hw was City Marshall 1836-1847, and Street Commissioner 1846-1862. He was a lifelong democrat. During many years he conducted investigations concerning the history of the Putnam family, and the immense number of letters received by him from persons born either in the last century (1700) or the early part of this (1800), has enabled the compiler of the published history to arrange in proper order many families which otherwise would have been lost. In his genealogical work he was very painstaking and presevering. His collection for a history of the family served as a basis for the History of the Putnam Family by Eben Putnam, and are deposited at the Essex Institute.

He married SARAH ABBOTT July 25, 1805.*

Notes for DAVID PUTNAM:

David Putnam was prominent in militia circles and rose to the rank of General. In 1807 he was one of the marshals appointed to receive President Monroe upon the occasion of his visit to Salem, Massachusetts. At one time, he was an unsuccessful candidate for mayor of Salem. He was a man of considerable prominence and worth. For many years he was a merchant in the dry goods trade. He adopted two nephews of his wife, by the name of Abbott: one known as Abbott Putnam lived for a while in Danvers, Massachusetts; the other, David, probably the "young artist of promise." These young men are not known to have left any descendants.

He married ELIZABETH WARE August 24, 1831, daughter of HENRY WARE and ELIZABETH BOWES.*

Notes for GEORGE PUTNAM:

George Putnam's father died before he was town years old. Accident and disease carried off all his siblings except the oldest and himself, the youngest, before he had finished his college course, and he was familiar from his earliest years with sorrow and care, as well as with the noblest patience and courage. His love and reverence for his mother, to whom he attributed all his opportunities for a successful career, were among the strongest and deepest feelings of his nature, and inspired many eloquent and touching passages in his preaching throughout his life. His mother was determined he should have a college education, and made without flinching the sacrifices that many a New England mother has before and since made to that end. He was sent to Leicester and Groton Academies, and in 1822 entered the freshman class at Harvard University - graduating in due course and with high standing in 1826. His remarkable gift of fresh and racy eloquence, joined to intellectual abilities of a high order, attracted attention even during his college career. His intention after graduating was to return to his paternal farm, and help his mother to carry it on. He decided, however, to spend a year in teaching, and was installed soon after graduating as master of the Duxbury Academy, one of a then large class of secondary schools, based on generous but inadequate foundations, which served a very useful purpose in their day, but have generally been starved out or absorbed in town high schools under the present system. While at Duxbury, he was urged by the Reverend Benjamin Kent, the local Unitarian minister, and by Henry Ware, Jr., then professor in the Divinity school at Cambridge, Massachusetts, to enter the ministry, and partly through their persuasion, but mainly, no doubt, from his own feeling that that way lay his true career, he entered the Divinity School in 1827. Graduating in 1830, he had already been several months settled over the First Church at Roxbury, where he remained till his death in 1878.

He almost immediately took a high rank among the preaches of the day; but he devoted himself as earnestly to the cares of his parish, every member of which always found in him a personal friend, as to the preparation of the weekly discourse which soon began, and during the whole of his ministry continued, to be looked forward to by great numbers both of his own congregation and of others who crowded his great church, with eager anticipation and curiosity. One or two attempts were made to induce him to leave the quiet suburb where he was settled for New York or Boston, and he was strongly urged in 1845 to go to Cambridge as Hollis Professor of Divinity and College Preacher. But he preferred to keep on in the place where he had started, and in the lines of work which he had laid out for himself in the beginning of his career.

In 1852, when Dr. Walker was made President of Harvard College, Dr. Putnam was chosen a Fellow of the Corporation in his place, and served the college in that capacity till shortly before his death.

In 1853 he was a member of the convention to revise the State Constitution.

During the war he broke the habit of his life to take no part in public affairs, except to preach an occasional political sermon on Fast and Thanksgiving days, and took an active part in public meetings in his own neighborhood to aid and encourage the government. He was one of the few who never faltered in his confidence in Abraham Lincoln. Very early in the struggle he formed the highest estimate of his character and ability, and never swerved from it through all the doubts and anxieties of those terrible years, when it often seemed to the most patriotic and sanguine that the government was hopelessly weak and wrong-headed.

In 1869 and 1870 he represented his fellow-citizens in the State Legislature, where he acquired great influence and respect.

In 1872, while still apparently in the full vigor of his powers and while his reputation and popularity as a preacher was undiminished, he was suddenly struck with paralysis, and, although his mind was never affected and after a time he partially recovered his strength, he never was able to fully resume his work. He died in April, 1878, in his seventy-first year.

He married (1) SARAH PUTNAM FOWLER February 28, 1836, daughter of JOHN FOWLER and MARTHA PAGE. He married (2) ELIZABETH PUTNAM POPE November 07, 1844, daughter of NATHANIEL POPE and ABI PRESTON.

Notes for ANDREW MERRIAM PUTNAM:

Captain Andrew Putnam possessed many of the striking traits of the family. He followed the sea for more than twenty years and passed through many thrilling experiences. The one of which he most delighted to tell was the recapture of the ship Friendship from the Malays in 1831, in which he took part, and about which he loved to say that he had been in one battle at least. In command of a vessel he was self-poised, full of expedients, and in danger intrepid.

The capture and plunder of the ship Friendship of Salem, Massachusetts, commanded by Charles M. Endicott, was an exciting incident of the East India trade of Salem. The ship Friendship sailed from Salem 26 May, 1830, for the west coast of Sunatra, known as the "pepper coast," and reached her destination in September, 1830. The dealings with the Malay or Acheenise inhabitants of the coast had been generally conducted without friction, though the American shipmasters from experience had learned to trust the natives not too freely. The friendship was waiting near Qualah Battoo for the new crop of pepper to complete her cargo. Early in February, 1831, Captain Endicott and several of his party visited the town and were detained on shore by buying pepper. A party of Malays succeeded in secreting themselves on one of the native boats engaged in loading and through the over confidence of the chief mate, who lost his life, intruded themselves on the vessel and succeeded in capturing her. Captain Endicott and his party perceived what was going on in time to reach their boat and make their way out to the ship, but found her completely in the hands of the natives. Making a sail of gunny bags they succeeded in reaching Muckie where they fell in with the James Monroe of New York City, the Governor Endicott of Salem, and the Palmer of Boston, Massachusetts, the masters of which offered their aid to regain the lost ship. This was a difficult matter, as the Malays refused to surrender their prize. Shots were exchanged between the American ships and the forts on shore, which mounted several six-pounders, as well as with the Friendship, whose guns were manned by the Malays. The guns of the forts were silenced and preparations made to cut out the Friendship. Just as the boats were about to get away smoke was seen arising from the Friendship, the Malays having accidentally exploded an open keg of gun powder. The boarding party anticipated a severe struggle but on their approach the Malays abandoned the vessel with all haste. The original attack on the ship had resulted in the death and wounding of several of her crew, though a few managed to escape to the jungle, where they suffered greatly, but afterwards, together with the wounded, regained their vessel. The ship's original crew was seventeen men. Mr. Putnam must have been on board the brig Governor Endicott which assisted in the recapture. The Friendship was sadly plundered. She reached Salem with her pepper in July. The following year the U.S. frigate Potomac, Commander Downes bombarded the town and landing 300 men under the guidance of Barry, formerly second officer of the Friendship, carried the forts by storm after severe fighting. Captain Endicott's account of the "Priacy of the Friendship" may be read in Essex Institute Historical Coll. I., p. 15.

His earlier voyages were made from Salem, for the Pingrees and Silsbees, the old Salem shipowners; later he sailed from Boston, and the last vessels he commanded sailed from New York City. In this comparatively short period, commerce had shifted from the smaller ports to the great metropolis.

He was a firm believer in the temperance cause. He made a journey to Chicago, Illinois, walking the distance, and as often as his comrade stopped to run, Putnam would pour his portion into his shoes, thus keeping himself clearer in brain and less footsore than his companion.

As a citizen he was loyal and energetic. For the poor he gave a cheering word and timely aid, obtaining for many a houseless family the shelter of a home roof. The good which he did to individuals and to the community in assisting laboring men to secure homes, can be estimated by the love and respect in which he was held by the poor as well as the more fortunate. Throughout his life he was a consistent Christian, an untiring worker, and a generous contributor to the activities of the Church. Late in life he united with the Church. He was quick-witted and efficient in whatever he undertook, fond of a good story, always ready for work or for play, as the time required. He was an excellent example of the old-fashioned New England shipmaster, of high moral and kindly character and practical abilities.

REMICK November 23, 1881 in Boston, Massachusetts.*

Notes for ALLEN PUTNAM:

Allen Putnam entered Franklin Academy at North Andover, Massachusetts, 18 March, 1818, and entered Harvard University from there in 1821. He graduated in 1825. After graduation he spent three years in teaching. In 1828 he entered the Cambridge Divinity School. On 23 November, 1831, he was ordained at South Danvers, Massachusetts. The preceding year had been devoted to itinerant missionary work. Early in December he assumed charge of the Unitarian Church at Augusta, Maine, where he remained till the death of his wife, and the break-down of his health. From 1834 to 1841, he remained on the paternal farm in Danvers. He became editor of the New England Farmer the last-mentioned year. But in 1843 he established himself in the coal business in Roxbury, Massachusetts, where he remained twenty years. During the latter years of his life he was much interested in Spiritualism and published several books on the subject. He represented Danvers in the General Court, 1836, 1840, and 1841, and Roxbury in 1847 and 1852.

He possessed fine ability, together with a generous disposition and a reverent heart. Of his father's home he wrote: "Ours was a home of industry, Harmony, and contentment, burdened by neither poverty nor riches. Morality and religion was constantly inculcated by both precept and example. Both parents lived the life of the righteous and their children have reason to cherish most fond affection and reverence for them both, and to be grateful for the careful training they received."

He married SUSANNA HERRICK PUTNAM June 21, 1832, daughter of MOSES PUTNAM and BETSEY PUTNAM.

Notes for DANIEL FRANKLIN PUTNAM:

Daniel Franklin Putnam was trained as a farmer and shoe manufacturer. In those days the manufacture of shoes was carried on at many of the farms in Danvers, Massachusetts. Early in life he associated himself with his brother, Alira Herrick Putnam, in the shoe-manufacturing business, under the firm name of D.F. Putnam & Company. The firm manufactured shoes for the southern market. In their business they employed many of their neighbors, and people in Middleton, Massachusetts. The uppers were cut in the shop; these were then delivered to women to be bound at home. The shoes were made in the little shops which were to be seen in the yards of most homesteads throughout the shoe towns of the county.

Mr. Putnam took a lively interest in the welfare of the town. He was instrumental in establishing the Village Bank, in 1836, now the First National Bank. He married SARAH BRADSTREET October 09, 1834, daughter of DUDLEY BRADSTREET and POLLY PORTER.

Notes for AHIRA HERRICK PUTNAM:

Ahira Herrick Putnam, early in life associated himself with his brother, Daniel Franklin Putnam, in the shoe-manufacturing business, under the firm name of D.F. Putnam & Company. In those days the manufacture of shoes was carried on at many of the farms in Danvers, Massachusetts. The firm manufactured shoes for the southern market. In their business they employed many of their neighbors, and people in Middleton, Massachusetts. The uppers were cut in the shop; these were then delivered to women to be bound at home. The shoes were made in the little shops which were to be seen in the yards of most homesteads throughout the shoe towns of the county.

He was especially fond of horses and cattle, and was, also, the first to introduce dahlias in Danvers. He was superintendent of the Sunday-school of the First Church and greatly interested in church work. The initial H. was added to his name by act of legislature.

His life was cut short by the typhus epidemic of 1839, which was disastrous to many Danvers homes. His brother Daniel also succumbed to the same fever a few weeks before him.

Notes for WALLACE AHIRA PUTNAM:

Wallace Ahira Putnam was first named Lyman Holton Putnam. He was killed at Stoughton, Massachusetts, of wounds received at the crossing of the North Anna. The historian of the 10th Regiment said of him, "Many a tear was shed to the memory of the gallant Putnam." On the Soldiers' Monument, his name leads the list of Danvers' slain in the war. His military record is as follows: mustered 21 June, 1861, Company E, 10th regiment, 2d Lieutenant; 1st Lieutenant, 28 July, 1862; resigned 24 January, 1863; mustered 1 August, 1863, 56th Infantry; Captain 21 November, 1863; Major 7 May 1864; wounded 24 May, 1864. At Spottsylvania in the battles of the 12th and 18th he led his regiment. Prior to enlistment he had been teaching in the High School at South Hadley. He had graduated from the Bridgewater Normal School.

He married (3) CATHERINE ANN SEVIER 1825 in Port Gibson, Mississippi, daughter of JOHN SEVIER.*

Notes for ALBIGENCE WALDO PUTNAM:

Albigenice Waldo Putnam was born at the family place, Maple Shade, opposite Blennerhassett's Island. He was graduated from the Ohio University at Athens, Ohio, and went to Gallipolis, where he lived with a French family to perfect himself in that language. He was a close student and fond of the dead languages, in which he was an adept. There he made the acquaintance of Samuel Finley Vinton, then commencing the practice of law, and with him Putnam studied law. He was admitted to the bar, and removed to Port Gibson, Mississippi, where his uncle fitted him out with office and library. The office was situated in the uncle's garden and never bore a sign, for, said he to the young lawyer, "Keep your office and the office will keep you." Mr. Putnam became a successful lawyer and rose high in the esteem of the public. He was a director in the best managed bank in Mississippi, The Bank of Mississippi. In 1825 he married Miss Sevier, whose acquaintance he made during her residence with her paternal aunt, Mrs Daniel Vetner, of Burlington, Mississippi, near Port Gibson. He abandoned the practice of law many years before his death, having acquired a large property. The later years of his life were devoted to literary pursuits. He was president of the Tennessee Historical Society and author of the History of Middle Tennessee. He was and elder in the Presbyterian Church at Nashville, Tennessee (under the charge of reverend John Todd Edgar). The Civil War proved disastrous to his fortune, and his library and family papers were destroyed by fire during its continuance.

He married (2) ELIZA WHIPPLE June 16, 1844 in Putnam, Ohio, daughter of LEVI WHIPPLE and ELIZABETH. He married (3) SARAH C. June 24, 1867 in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Notes for DOUGLAS PUTNAM:

Douglas Putnam graduated from Yale University in 1826. In those days the journey from Marietta, Ohio, to New Haven, Connecticut, was performed on horseback and took six weeks. During their studies at Yale, Douglas and his brothers visited their home but once. The return to college was by the Erie Canal, then recently made available for passenger traffic, "a rapid and luxurious means of travel." On 15 March, 1832, a meeting was held at Marietta, of which Douglas Putnam was secretary, which resulted in establishing the Marietta Collegiate Institute, chartered as Marietta College in February, 1835. For sixty-three years Putnam served as secretary, and every diploma until commencement, 1894, bears his signature. He was thoroughly alive to the interests of the institution. His first gift was $200 in 1833, and the aggregate of his gifts to the college was nearly $80,000.

Mr. Putnam had interests in many business and public enterprises. He was director in the old Bank of Marietta for some years before its charter expired in 1842; a director in the Marietta branch of the State Bank of Ohio, established in 1846; also a director, and for a time president, of the Marietta National Bank, which went out of business years ago (before 1899). For fifteen years he was diector in the Belpre (changed to Marietta, 1850) and Cincinnati Railroad Company, of which he was a charter member.

A correspondent who knew him and his family well, writes: "The Putnam have ever been men of strong characteristics, thoroughly honest, vigorous and self-reliant, independent, with no questionable acts except as resulting from determined convictions, perhaps sometimes from prejudices that were not weak. Douglas Putnam had more suavity in his manner than is usual with the lineage, wherever found. His benevolence of expression was clear, his every act kind.

"Although ever taking a lively interest in public affairs, Mr. Putnam seemed to be devoid of personal political ambition. In 1846, on the reappraisalment of the property of Ohio for taxation, his eminent fitness caused him to be selected for the State Board of Equalization, and he held the same place again in 1871. In 1827 he became a member of the Congregational Church of Marietta - transferred to the Harmar Church on its organization in 1840, of which latter church he was the father, a relation continued throughout his life.

"He was a man of strong and loving religious character, of childlike trust and untiring helpfulness to his fellow-men, of large benevolences and unbounded hospitality. His home was a home to every reasonable comer - a veritable hospital, with outlying branches. What was done by him can only be estimated by the Supreme Power. He substantially `administered upon his own estate,' as was intended by him, and if he fell short it was from human imperfection."

She married PERLEY PUTNAM November 05, 1801 in Danvers, Massachusetts, son of NATHAN PUTNAM and HANNAH PUTNAM.

Notes for PERLEY PUTNAM:

Colonel Perley Putnam in early life was a ship carpenter and helped build the frigate Essex. He became a builder, and furnished the plans and specifications for the present custom house at Salem, Massachusetts, and superintended its construction. He was instrumental as First Captain in establishing the Mechanic Light Infantry, 1807. Commissioned Major 48th Regiment, United State Army, 1813, and in the autumn of that year he was assigned the command of Fort Sullivan at Eastport, Maine. Having under his command but 48 effective men, he was forced to surrender that place to the british General Sir Thomas Hardy, in command of a fleet of seven ships and a land force of 2000 troops. He was prominent in town and city affairs, frequently selectman of Salem and in 1836 helped draft the first city charter. Hw was City Marshall 1836-1847, and Street Commissioner 1846-1862. He was a lifelong democrat. During many years he conducted investigations concerning the history of the Putnam family, and the immense number of letters received by him from persons born either in the last century (1700) or the early part of this (1800), has enabled the compiler of the published history to arrange in proper order many families which otherwise would have been lost. In his genealogical work he was very painstaking and persevering. His collection for a history of the family served as a basis for the History of the Putnam Family by Eben Putnam, and are deposited at the Essex Institute.

Notes for BENJAMIN CLAYTON PUTNAM:

Benjamin Clayton Putnam was born in Plaistow, New Hampshire, his father moving from Danvers, Massachusetts, a short time before his birth. He was a son of Benjamin Putnam and the sixth Benjamin Putnam in direct descent. In 1837 his farther with his family came back to Danvers and the son entered the shop of Procter Perley, as clerk. He moved to Wenham, Massachusetts, in 1845 and although of a very retiring disposition, was chosen to represent the town in the Legislature, that year and for 16 years thereafter (1845-1862). He was Town Clerk for many years. In 1866 he became a resident of Chelsea, Massachusetts, was Aldreman of that city 1875-76-77. Mr. Putnam purchased a house on Locust Street, Danvers, and moved there in 1886. He was a philanthropist and public spirited man, of liberal views and was connected with the Universalist Church, and of the church in Chelsea he was deacon. He was deeply interested in the genealogy of the family and collected considerable material, which, before his death he placed in the hands of Dr. Amos P. Putnam.

Notes for ELVINA DUDLEY:

She was great great granddaughter of Henry Putnam (No. 160).

He married EUNICE L. PERKINS September 17, 1843.

Notes for THOMAS MEADY PUTNAM:

Thomas M. Putnam was an old and well-known resident of Danvers, died at his home on Maple street, June 9, aged 79 years, 8 months, 25 days.

He was born in Putnamville, Sept. 15, 1817, son of Samuel and Mary Putnam. He was one of 13 children; nine of whom lived to middle age; and five past the allotted age of man. He was educated at Pembroke Academy, New Hampshire.

He was a man of strict integrity, honest almost to a fault, a hard worker, spending few idle minutes; apt in the use of tools, doing many a job of carpenters' work in a manner creditable to a trained workman. When a young man, he built a large and pretty summer house in his father's garden at the old homestead. Through summer heats and winter storms, it has stood for these many years, until a short time ago (before 1898).

In early manhood he worked first in his father's shoe factory, later for his uncle Moses. Moses and Samuel Putnam being pioneers in this branch of industry in Essex County. Afterward he was in business for himself; first, having a leather store in Boston, Massachusetts; later he manufactured shoes in his father's old factory at Putnamville for some years.

In 1861 he moved to Danvers Plains. In 1863 he moved to his home on Maple Street, where he has since lived and died. For some years after leaving Putnamville he was in the produce business, afterward he dealt in nursery stock. For several years previous to his death he had not been in any regular business.

He possessed a fund of dry wit and humor, was something of mimic, and generally had a good story to tell, fitted to the occasion. He was fond of music, had a good bass voice, and sang in the the church for years; fond of pets, and extremely fond of flowers. When dealing in nursery stock it was his delight to procure and cultivate rare plants and shrubs.

For the past two years, he had been in failing health, and more especially for the past few months, but the immediate cause of his death was strangulated hernia. He lived 10 days after the operation, which for his age and general condition, was remarkable successful. But the trouble centered in the brain and most of the time he was delirious. His sickness was very distressing in every way, but, at the last, the end was most peaceful.

Mr. Putnam had been a consistent exemplary member of the Maple Street (Congregational) church for about 30 years. He was very regular in his attendance at church and Sunday school until his health failed, especially at Sunday school, in which he retained his interest in a marked degree, often going an entire year, without missing a single Sunday.

He married Eunice L. Perkins, of Hampton Falls; N.H., Sept. 17, 1843, with whom he lived nearly 54 years. During the last few months of increasing feebleness, when heart and flesh failed him, his wife had power to soothe and influence to control as no one else could.

Five children were born to them. Two boys died in infancy. The surviving children are Mrs. Flora A. Foster of Peabody, Miss S. Agnes Putnam, who has always lived at home, and Webster F. Putnam, of Danvers, in business as a banker in Boston.

His brother Henry was his only other near relative. He lives at the old homestead at Putnamville, where he was born and where he has always lived, the last one of that large family circle. - Salem News.

She married (1) BENJAMIN KENT WFT Est. 1769-1802. She married (2) ANDREW PUTNAM September 01, 1774, son of EDMUND PUTNAM and ANNA ANDREWS.

Notes for ANDREW PUTNAM:

Andrew Putnam had rather a chequered career. He was occasionally in office from 1778-1780, but in 1782 got into a law dispute with Dr. Endicott and finally left Danvers, Massachusetts, going to New York. He seems to have made some pretensions to practising medicine. Pyncheon's diary gives some interesting facts concerning "Dr. Andrew Putnam." He owned land in Danvers and Marblehead. He was possible the Andrew Putnam who was commissioned captain, 24 April, 1778, of the 7th company, 8th Essex regiment Massachusetts Militia. Administration granted to Israel Putnam, 3d, 16 November, 1785.

She married JOSEPH ORNE May 19, 1817.

Notes for SALLY FISKE ROPES:

Her grandfather was one of the noted men of Colonial days. Judge Ropes was graduated at Harvard College in 1745 and was a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, in 1766 Chief Justice, and in 1772 placed on the bench of the Superior Court of Judicature. He was also representative to the General Court, and a member of the Executive Council. At the time of pre-revolutionary troubles, he, in common with most of the principal people of wealth and education, was averse to the radical movements on foot and this with his official position rendered him obnoxious to the commoner sort of persons. While ill with small pox, his house was assailed by a mob, who broke in the windows, and threatened to assassinate him. The strain was so severe, in his weak state, that he died the next day, 18 March, 1774. He and Dr. Eben Putnam were great friends, which was afterward cemented by a marriage between the families. His residence, on Essex Street, opposite Cambridge Street, was occupied by his granddaughter Mrs. Orne and after her death by her nephew Nathaniel Ropes. Recently (about 1890) it has been moved back and is now the residence of the Misses Ropes who have kept the old house externally nearly as it was but the interior unfortunately was recently damaged by fire.

He married ELIZABETH APPLETON WFT Est. 1817-1847, daughter of NATHANIEL APPLETON and ELIZABETH WARD.

Notes for EBENEZER PUTNAM:

After graduation, and until the financial reverses sustained by Ebenezer Putnam's father, he studied law with Benjamin Merrill of Salem, Massachusetts. He then prepared several young men for college, residing in Belfast, Maine, and afterward on the Williams Plantation in Virginia. This was but a temporary occupation, and he was soon back in Salem, where he formed a partnership with Thomas Bancroft and settled in Cincinnati, Ohio, about 1824, engaging in a general commission business, which necessitated frequent business trips to New Orleans, Louisiana. He was recalled to Salem by the death of his father and having married there, although still looking forward to a final settlement in the West, he accepted the appointment as Postmaster at Salem in 1829. Mr. Putnam had been a staunch Federalist but supported General Jackson, and remained a Democrat until his death. He was one of the first board of Alderman of the city of Salem, and in 1859 refused the nomination for Mayor. He was devoted to horticulture and was one of the earliest floriculturists to devote a hothouse to the raising of cacti. After his return from the West in 1826, he never actively engaged in business, but was the trusted manager of many estates.
