She married JONATHAN BUGBEE February 1813, son of JONATHAN BUGBEE.

Notes for HARRIET PUTNAM:

The following account in furnished by the Honorable Deloss Putnam:

"In February, 1813, Harriet, the only daughter, and eldest of the children, was united in marriage to Jonathan Bugbee, and in the January following removed with her husband to the distant wilds of Chautauqua, where he had previously prepared a home.

"Harriet Putnam, was united in marriage Bugbee in February, 1813. Wedding tours were not then enjoyed in the elegance and comfort of palace coaches, but the young bride was not unhappy in the society of her gallant companion, as they plodded slowly forward, with oxen and sled, to the little clearing and home he had prepared in the forest.

"About 1821, Harriet's husband extended their buildings, and for a few days kept a tavern. After the death of Mr. Bugbee in 1829, their son, Judge L., arranged with the heirs that he should retain the homestead, and the widow generally made taht her home until her death in Oct., 1880, at the age of eighty-eight years.

"Of the children of Harriet, Andrew Putnam Bugbee, born Aug. 5, 1816, married a lady of Chandlers Valley, Pa., at which place he now resides. Judge L. Bugbee was born Feb. 10, 1818, and married Mary Ann Flagg. He was a prominent citizen, faithful to many official positions, and an author of much distinction. From his sketches of the pioneer history of the county is gathered much information contained in these sketches. Since the death of Judge on June 9, 1888, his only son, J. Eugene, retains the old homestaed at Centralia, N.Y. Of the remaining children of Harriet, Charity, widow of the late Israel Strong, resides in Crestone, Colorado; and Hattie, the accomplished wife of J. Garrish Chamberlain, a gentleman of much influence and culture, has a beautiful home in Sheffield, Alabama."

He married MARY LOUISA DUNCAN December 09, 1854, daughter of JOSEPH DUNCAN and ELIZABETH SMITH.*

Notes for CHARLES EDWIN PUTNAM:

Charles Edwin Putnam was admitted to the bar in 1847, he practised in Saratoga, New York and New York City and afterwards in Georgia, but in 1854 settled in Davenport, where he became identified with its financial and commercial interests, being president of the Davenport Savings Bank, Gas Company, and Blow Works, President of the Board of Education and of the Academy of Sciences.

No single name in the history of Davenport - and there are many that shed luster upon the city - has more associations of high character connected with it than that of Putnam. The latest death, that of W. C. Putnam, the well known Davenport lawyer, recalls a roll of honor of which all citizens are rightly and pardonably proud. The name indicates natural gifts. It belongs to the early history of the West and to that of the country, in a patriotic way. It stands for achievement in different directions, and especially so in a local way.

The synonym for Putnam in Davenport is the Academy of Natural Sciences. No other name is so intimately and so materially connected with the institution. Joseph Duncan Putnam gave science his life, and while comparatively young in years won by his conscientious work in an original field, a national distinction. He could not have done it without cooperation of his mother, and the other members of the family. Mr. Putnam, a leading lawyer in the state, a man of literary inclinations and ability, left a monument for usefulness in many ways. His widow, Mary Louisa (Duncan) Putnam, took up the work that her son, Joseph, and husband had left unfinished, and with perseverance and courage carried it through many critical years of its existence. And when she was called there was sincere mourning among thousands.

But the deaths of these three devoted friends of science, of art, and of literature, was not followed by a cessation of endeavor. The brother who has so suddenly ended his active career, the sister whose zeal was unflinching when the hour of necessity came, and others of the Putnam circle assumed the duty and carried it forward in the family spirit.

- v. WILLIAM CLEMENT PUTNAM, b. June 26, 1862; d. January 13, 1906.

Notes for WILLIAM CLEMENT PUTNAM:

William Clement Putnam chose another line of professional effort, the law, and he succeeded in it far beyond the average. But with all the distractions and responsibilities of the law, Mr. Putnam found time to cultivate his taste for art, for literature, and for civic interest. Not only this but his loyalty to the Academy of Sciences was abiding. As a member of the finance committee and other committees he continued the traditions of the family, giving of his means freely. Mr. Putnam had large financial interest in Davenport, but outside of them his loyalty was unwavering and true. In many ways he was the steadfast friend of his city and of its institutions, its library, its parks, its charities, its schools, and its better life. His death is a distinct loss, and it comes home to many in different ways.

Ultimately his entire estate worth several hundred thousand dollars will go to the Academy. Also his art, Historical and Scientific books and his collection of etchings and pictures. He was one of the most prominent and distinguished citizens of Davenport. His brother Edward Kirby Putnam was left in charge his estate.

Notes for ALFRED PORTER PUTNAM:

Alfred Porter Putnam, D.D., graduated at brown University with valedictory honors in 1852 and studied divinity at the Divinity School in Cambridge, Massachusetts, was graduated from Divinity School in 1855. He was ordained and installed as pastor of the Mt. Pleasant, Congregational (Unitarian) Church, Roxbury, Massachusetts, 19december, 1855, where he continued until called to the pulpit of the First Unitarian Church of Brooklyn, New York, September, 1864. His pastorate over this important church continued until 1886, when he retired to Concord, Massachusetts, and still later to Danvers, Massachusetts, where he was very active in all that pertained to the good of the town and its people. He was always interested in historical and genealogical pursuits, and for many years was president of the Danvers Historical Society.

Dr. Putnam was a man of profound convictions. He entered heart and soul into the antislavery campaign and throughout the war by voice and pen aided the cause of freedom. In late years he was an equally ardent anti-imperialist. As an orator he was surpassed by few. His great speech in 1862 in London at a dinner of Americans on the 4 July, when he was called upon to respond to the toast "The Constitution of United States," attracted wide attention as a masterpiece of patriotic eloquence, and he was sought after throughout his life to speak at patriotic meetings at which the great movements and policies were discussed of condemned.

He was especially active in benevolent works.

She married ANDREW MERRIAM PUTNAM November 07, 1844, son of JESSE PUTNAM and ELIZABETH MERRIAM.*

Notes for ELIZABETH PUTNAM POPE:

Putnam Leaflet, Feb-Mar 1896 - Mrs. Elizabeth Pope Putnam of Danvers, widow of Captain Andrew Merriam Putnam, observed her eightieth birthday of february twelfth, by an afternoon tea. More than one hundred relatives and friends called and extended congratulations, bring flowers and other tributes of their esteem. Mrs Putnam is descended in five lines from the emigrant John Putnam: four times through her father

1. Nathaniel Pope, whose mother was Hannah Putnam (No. 757), Deacon Daniel, Amos, John, Nathaniel, John;
 2. Elizabeth (No. 396) wife of Daniel, and daughter of Samuel, Eleazer, Captian John, John;
 3. Elizabeth (No. 293) wife of Samuel, and daughter of Tarrant, Benjamin, Nathaniel, John;
 4. Mehitable (No. 163) wife of Joseph Pope, 3d. Mrs Putnam's great, great grandfather, and daughter of John 3d, Captain John, John;
 5. Also through her mother, Abi Preston, granddaughter of John Preston, who married Hannah Putnam (No. 265) daughter of Joshua, John, Nathaniel, John.
- Among her other ancestors in the Preston line, are Rebecca Nurse and Peregrine White.

Notes for ANDREW MERRIAM PUTNAM:

Captain Andrew Putnam possessed many of the striking traits of the family. He followed the sea for more than twenty years and passed through many thrilling experiences. The one of which he most delighted to tell was the recapture of the ship Friendship from the Malays in 1831, in which he took part, and about which he loved to say that he had been in one battle at least. In command of a vessel he was self-poised, full of expedients, and in danger intrepid.

The capture and plunder of the ship Friendship of Salem, Massachusetts, commanded by Charles M. Endicott, was an exciting incident of the East India trade of Salem. The ship Friendship sailed from Salem 26 May, 1830, for the west coast of Sunatra, known as the "pepper coast," and reached her destination in September, 1830. The dealings with the Malay or Acheenise inhabitants of the coast had been generally conducted without friction, though the American shipmasters from experience had learned to trust the natives not too freely. The friendship was waiting near Qualah Battoo for the new crop of pepper to complete her cargo. Early in February, 1831, Captain Endicott and several of his party visited the town and were detained on shore by buying pepper. A party of Malays succeeded in secreting themselves on one of the native boats engaged in loading and through the over confidence of the chief mate, who lost his life, intruded themselves on the vessel and succeeded in capturing her. Captain Endicott and his party preceived what was going on in time to reach their boat and make their way out to the ship, but found her completely in the hands of the natives. Making a sail of gunny bags they succeeded in reaching Muckie where they fell in with the James Monroe of New York City, the Governor Endicott of Salem, and the Palmer of Boston, Massachusetts, the masters of which offered their aid to regain the lost ship. This was a difficult matter, as the Malays refused to surrender their prize. Shots were exchanged between the American ships and the forts on shore, which mounted several six-pounders, as well as with the Friendship, whose guns were manned by the Malays. The guns of the forts were silenced and preparations made to cut out the Friendship. Just as the boats were about to get away smoke was seen arising from the Friendship, the Malays having accidentally exploded an open keg of gun powder. The boarding party anticipated a severe struggle but on their approach the Malays abandoned the vessel with all haste. The original attack on the ship had resulted in the death and wounding of several of her crew, though a few managed to escape to the jungle, where they suffered greatly, but afterwards, together with the wounded, regained their vessel. The ship's original crew was seventeen men. Mr. Putnam must have been on board the brig Governor Endicott which assisted in the recapture. The Friendship was sadly plundered. She reached Salem with her pepper in July. The following year the U.S. frigate Potomac, Commander Downes bombarded the town and landing 300 men under the guidance of Barry, formerly second officer of the Friendship, carried the forts by storm after severe fighting. Captain Endicott's account of the "Priacy of the Friendship" may be read in Essex Institute Historical Coll. I., p. 15.

His earlier voyages were made from Salem, for the Pingrees and Silsbees, the old Salem shipowners; later he sailed from Boston, and the last vessels he commanded sailed from New York City. In this comparatively short period, commerce had shifted from the smaller ports to the great metropolis.

He was a firm believer in the temperance cause. He made a journey to Chicago, Illiois, walking the distance, and as often as his comrade stopped to run, Putnam would pour his portion into his shoes, thus keeping himself clearer in brain and less footsore than his companion.

As a citizen he was loyal and energetic. For the poor he gave a cheering word and timely aid, obtaining for many a houseless family the shelter of a home roof. The good which he did to individuals and to the community in assisting laboring men to secure homes, can be estimated by the love and respect in which he was held by the poor as well as the more fortunate.

Throughout his life he was a consistent Christian, an untiring worker, and a generous contributor to the activities of the Church. Late in life he united with the Church. He was quick-witted and efficient in whatever he undertook, fond of a good story, always ready for work of for play, as the time required. He was an excellent example of the old-fashioned New England shipmaster, of high moral and kindly character and practical abilities.

She married ANDREW MERRIAM PUTNAM February 28, 1836, son of JESSE PUTNAM and ELIZABETH MERRIAM.

Notes for ANDREW MERRIAM PUTNAM:

Captain Andrew Putnam possessed many of the striking traits of the family. He followed the sea for more than twenty years and passed through many thrilling experiences. The one of which he most delighted to tell was the recapture of the ship Friendship from the Malays in 1831, in which he took part, and about which he loved to say that he had been in one battle at least. In command of a vessel he was self-poised, full of expedients, and in danger intrepid.

The capture and plunder of the ship Friendship of Salem, Massachusetts, commanded by Charles M. Endicott, was an exciting incident of the East India trade of Salem. The ship Friendship sailed from Salem 26 May, 1830, for the west coast of Sunatra, known as the "pepper coast," and reached her destination in September, 1830. The dealings with the Malay or Acheenise inhabitants of the coast had been generally conducted without friction, though the American shipmasters from experience had learned to trust the natives not too freely. The friendship was waiting near Qualah Battoo for the new crop of pepper to complete her cargo. Early in February, 1831, Captain Endicott and several of his party visited the town and were detained on shore by buying pepper. A party of Malays succeeded in secreting themselves on one of the native boats engaged in loading and through the over confidence of the chief mate, who lost his life, intruded themselves on the vessel and succeeded in capturing her. Captain Endicott and his party perceived what was going on in time to reach their boat and make their way out to the ship, but found her completely in the hands of the natives. Making a sail of gunny bags they succeeded in reaching Muckie where they fell in with the James Monroe of New York City, the Governor Endicott of Salem, and the Palmer of Boston, Massachusetts, the masters of which offered their aid to regain the lost ship. This was a difficult matter, as the Malays refused to surrender their prize. Shots were exchanged between the American ships and the forts on shore, which mounted several six-pounders, as well as with the Friendship, whose guns were manned by the Malays. The guns of the forts were silenced and preparations made to cut out the Friendship. Just as the boats were about to get away smoke was seen arising from the Friendship, the Malays having accidentally exploded an open keg of gun powder. The boarding party anticipated a severe struggle but on their approach the Malays abandoned the vessel with all haste. The original attack on the ship had resulted in the death and wounding of several of her crew, though a few managed to escape to the jungle, where they suffered greatly, but afterwards, together with the wounded, regained their vessel. The ship's original crew was seventeen men. Mr. Putnam must have been on board the brig Governor Endicott which assisted in the recapture. The Friendship was sadly plundered. She reached Salem with her pepper in July. The following year the U.S. frigate Potomac, Commander Downes bombarded the town and landing 300 men under the guidance of Barry, formerly second officer of the Friendship, carried the forts by storm after severe fighting. Captain Endicott's account of the "Priacy of the Friendship" may be read in Essex Institute Historical Coll. I., p. 15.

His earlier voyages were made from Salem, for the Pingrees and Silsbees, the old Salem shipowners; later he sailed from Boston, and the last vessels he commanded sailed from New York City. In this comparatively short period, commerce had shifted from the smaller ports to the great metropolis.

He was a firm believer in the temperance cause. He made a journey to Chicago, Illinois, walking the distance, and as often as his comrade stopped to run, Putnam would pour his portion into his shoes, thus keeping himself clearer in brain and less footsore than his companion.

The good which he did to individuals and to the community in assisting laboring men to secure homes, can be estimated by the love and respect in which he was held by the poor as well as the more fortunate.

Throughout his life he was a consistent Christian, an untiring worker, and a generous contributor to the activities of the Church. Late in life he united with the Church. He was quick-witted and efficient in whatever he undertook, fond of a good story, always ready for work or for play, as the time required. He married HELEN P. MELDRAM August 02, 1887.

Notes for WEBSTER F. PUTNAM:

Webster F. Putnam was educated in the town schools of Danvers and commenced his business career as a clerk in the office of John W. Porter, Esq., in 1873. Mr. Porter did a large business in government claims and conveyancing and the five years during which Mr. Putnam remained with Mr. Porter afforded him valuable experience, especially effecting real estate transactions. In 1878, an opportunity offering, Mr. Putnam entered the employ of the late Charles A. Putnam, who did a general banking and brokerage business in Boston, Massachusetts. The firm of Charles A. Putnam & Company was noted for the conservative and honorable business methods pursued. In 1880, the principal retiring from active business, the business was carried on by Webster F. Putnam and Nathaniel Heath, who had been a fellow clerk, under the style of Putnam & Heath. Upon the return of Mr. Charles A. Putnam from his European trip, with health restored, he invited Webster F. Putnam to enter into partnership with him, and this offer being accepted. The new firm was known as Charles A. & Webster F. Putnam. Later on Webster F. Putnam established himself in the same business in State Street, and is now situated in water Street doing business under the style of Webster F. Putnam & Company. Mr. Putnam lived in Danvers, Massachusetts, on Lindall Hill, where he had extensive real estate interest. He was administrator and trustee for many estates. He did much to open up land for residential purposes, having during five years alone built 34 homes in Danvers. He has his activity been confined to Danvers, for he was the first to realize and seize upon the advantages of similar opportunities in Manchester, Massachusetts. His intention was to provide means by which people of moderate incomes would become home-owners. As one would presume from the success which had come to him, he was wide awake, energetic, and conservative. In stature he was of about average height and of stout build. He had blue eyes and brown hair so common to a large portion of the Putnam tribe.

Notes for JANE ELIZA BALCOM:

The Eau Claire Leader, devoted several columns to an obituary of Mrs. Putnam. She held a place in the affections of the people of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, which was unique. Her life was filled with good deeds. "Into hundreds of homes of those less fortunately placed than herself she has gone with the cheery smile and helping hand." Thirty years before her death her husband gave her $60,000 to use as she wished, never to tell him how she had used it. After her death Mr. Putnam had letters from widely separated parts of the United States, from people she had helped, who had no claims upon her, telling of her charities. With what was left of this fund, $7,000, she requested that a mortuary chapel be erected in the cemetery for the use of the people of Eau Claire. Mrs. Putnam saw the first houst built in that city, now (1899) having a population of 20,000.
